INTRODUCTION

Content of „Major Ideas Of The New Revelation“, pg. iii - vi, Introduction

“This book consists of sixteen brief essays that primarily deal with the issues of the New Revelation. The major concepts, ideas and the understanding of the New Revelation are directly and indirectly discussed and explained. Each essay can be conceived of and read as a basically independent issue despite the fact that there is a loose interconnectedness among them. After all, they do deal with what is called here the New Revelation. Because of this relative independency, the reader can study various essays by simply picking any one of them at random, that is, by picking the one which sounds the most interesting to a reader or the title which triggers within the reader a strong desire to read it first.

The content of these essays, very often, will be difficult to accept at face value by some or even many readers. First of all, how many people in this world, nowadays, are interested in anything that deals with such a non-tangible issue as spiritual ideas and concepts related to something which is called the New Revelation? For many people, by their own definition, this is too impractical and useless from the standpoint of their daily, earthly endeavors. Secondly, even if one could find a considerable number of people who are interested in these issues, how many among them would be willing to accept that such a thing as a New Revelation is possible in the age of modern science and high technology?

Would it not be considered the ravings of a madman, at worst, or the wild fantasy and rich imagination of the writer, at best, rather than a revelation that comes directly from the Most High? Is it not true that knowledge about anything should be acquired by objective observation: the accumulation, classification, verification, scrutiny and cautious generalization of perceptible facts or data, using the well-defined procedures and tools prescribed by certain expected standards of a scientific mind; and not by some kind of obscure revelation that seemingly comes out of nowhere without any possibility of immediate, objective verification?

On the other hand, even though many people accept the fact that one of the important means of acquiring knowledge and understanding of truth is by a direct revelation from the Most High, they have difficulty accepting the fact that such a revelation can be granted in modern times. Many people believe that all needed revelations were granted to humankind once and for all at a certain time in the past and recorded in the so-called Holy Scriptures. They believe these Scriptures cannot be altered, modified, added to, built on, and that their validity has an absolute value that can never change.

Moreover, some people believe that such revelations can relate only to so-called religious matters and have no relevance to anything else or to any other aspects of everyday life.

These and similar views give one an impression that the Most High is no longer functionally in direct communication with people, but that He/She stated His/Her case and gave the license for discovery of truth either to science, or to the Holy Scriptures, or both, leaving everything up to them in deciding the meaning and content of the real truth. Many people even go so far as to proclaim that there is no God, the Most High, the Creator, and that everything is explainable and derivable from the natural laws that established themselves by themselves as a matter of chance or accident. For people like this, the content of this book will be the result of the ravings of a madman.

Whatever the case may be, for modern people it is not easy to believe or to accept that, at the present time, anything like the New Revelation is possible. Does it really mean that God, who is called here the Most High, tells someone or dictates to someone certain ideas, concepts and thoughts that constitute the New Revelation? Is it not true that such a claim can only come from a person who suffers from delusions of grandeur or megalomaniac paranoia, as psychiatrists and clinical psychologists would diagnose or label such a person? Or, perhaps for those who believe in spirits, is it not the result of being misled or deceived by some evil or negative spirit, or entity that claims to be the Most High; or a multiple personality of a sick mind that makes such claims; or simply a sophisticated imagination of the author who wants, by all means, to get people's attention for his own neurotic needs?

On the other hand, why do people need a New Revelation? Don't they have enough of all kinds of books that tell them about the truth and how to live their lives?

The essays, contained in these and other books by the author, give answers to these and similar questions.

But the problem with such answers is that people either accept them as true and sensible, or they reject them as meaningless or misleading.

So, one comes to the discovery of one of the major tenets of the New Revelation: it is up to everyone's freedom of choice to accept this as a true New Revelation of the Most High or to consider it to be the ravings of a madman, a wild fantasy, the imagination of the author, or whatever one wants to call it.

To be precise, these essays are not written for the purpose of trying to force people to accept them as a true revelation from the Most High or as part of that revelation. No such efforts are made by the author. They are written only for everyone's consideration.

Whoever is interested in deep spiritual issues and keeps his/her mind open and broad, will study them, consider them, meditate on them and subsequently will decide, from within himself/herself, whether what is presented here is really a part of the New Revelation or an intricate and interesting spiritual theory with which one may or may not agree, or a consequence of the author's wild imagination, or the ravings of a mentally ill mind. The tools and procedures for verification of any such claims are contained in the New Revelation and everyone is urged to apply those tools.

Whatever the conclusion that any prospective reader will arrive at in this respect, will be his/her personal, free conclusions and choices. The reader will be fully responsible for them and for any consequences of such conclusions.

It is a God-given gift and privilege, given to everyone, to be able to make decisions about all matters of life by his/her free choice and by his/her own free will and to bear the consequences of any decision.

If any one essay in this book is able to trigger a positive reaction in the reader that will lead him/her toward becoming a better human being, a more spiritual human being, and a more loving and wise human being, one cannot desire or expect more, and the purpose for which this and any other previous books by this author were written, will be fulfilled."
